The recognition of the academic quality of the College also continues to grow. Following our reclassification last year to the prestigious Liberal Arts I category by the Carnegie Foundation, Lycoming was moved from the regional college list to the national liberal arts colleges group by U. S. News & World Report. Recently, the Thompson/Peterson Guide to Competitive Colleges recognized Lycoming College as one of the 400 public and private colleges and universities defined as "Top Schools for Top Students."

What has caused Lycoming to be recognized in these ways? Academic reputations are built over many years. Today Lycoming stands on a strong base secured by decades of quality programs and by thousands of successful alumni. Your support has enabled the College to retain the traditional quality standard set by the nation's most highly regarded liberal arts institutions. Lycoming provides a broad-based curriculum of high quality delivered through small classes taught by highly credentialed faculty.

That model of small classes and superior faculty continues to prepare our students well. This year Phil Zimmerman '02 received a Fulbright for graduate work in New Zealand. Tom Coale '03 was selected for a coveted internship in the office of Vice President Cheney. Six of our students were involved with our faculty this summer in biochemical research through a grant from the Merck Pharmaceutical Company, and our placement rate for students applying to medical school approaches the highest levels.

In reviewing our alumni rosters, we find that in the past fifteen years our graduates have received many national honors, including a Pulitzer, an Oscar, an Emmy and a Peabody. The College counts with pride an ambassador, two bishops, top physicians, state teacher-of-the-year recipients, and many other "movers and shakers" in business, scientific research, education, the arts, law, government and the ministry. These and many other alumni serve their communities as coaches, scout leaders, and community volunteers.

Those of you who support the College financially realize that the combination of small classes and quality faculty also produces the most expensive undergraduate academic delivery system. We rely upon full-time faculty, not graduate students, to deliver our curriculum. In fact, our permanent faculty still delivers over 90% of all courses, a figure well over a third higher than the national average. The strength of our academic delivery system and the academic credentials of entering students are the two factors most recognized as quality indicators in the surveys of higher education.

Higher education has always been expensive in great part because it is labor-intensive. In the past decade and a half, Lycoming has also become technology-intensive. Even in the face of such additional expenses, we have worked diligently to keep costs in line. We continue to strive to make the Lycoming experience available to academically qualified students regardless of the level of their family incomes. Barron's now includes Lycoming as one of the 300 "Best Buys in Higher Education," an assessment of both educational quality and cost.

The strongest national liberal arts colleges have the highest levels of alumni support and the largest endowments. They have the non-tuition income to support and maintain their small classes and large percentages of full-time, permanent faculty. For Lycoming to continue to compete among the best colleges three things must be accomplished: (1) We must see continuing increases in the Annual Fund in order to ensure our margin of excellence by filling in the gap between net tuition revenues and the costs of our academic programs. (2) We must increase the percentage of alumni who give to the College annually because that figure is used by both foundations and in national surveys as a measure of excellence. (3) We must increase the College endowment significantly to provide long-term financial stability and to address in a permanent way the growing need for financial aid.

This year, as always, we said "good-bye" to many fine individuals, alumni and friends of the College who were loved by their families and will be missed by friends and the communities where they lived and worked. This year the list includes three alumni who were killed in the World Trade Center attack: Justin Molisani '81, a trader for EuroBank, who played football for Frank Girardi; Jon Vandevander '79, vice president for Carr Futures who had served on our Alumni Association Board; and Angela Vaira Kyte '73, a managing director of Marsh USA who was a former president of our Alumni Association Executive Committee. She was serving her first term on our Board of Trustees. The brother of one of our current students also was lost that sad day in New York. All alumni who died this year will continue to be a part of this College where a part of their own lives were formed.

I know you share with our trustees, faculty, staff and students the excitement generated by the changes here at Lycoming. I want to thank you for your generosity and for making Lycoming one of your priorities in such a difficult and tumultuous year in the nation's history. With your continued support, Lycoming College will be able to continue to make a difference in our students' futures.

Sincerely,

James E. Douthat
President

Dear

Alumni, Parents and Friends:

This is a very exciting time for me.

I am the parent of a brand new Lycoming College freshman, Class of 2006.

I share with my son, Peter, all the excitement of a new year and a new stage in his growth. He has, like the others in his class, made a bright choice for a bright future.

It's a new era for Lycoming College as well. Last year, Lycoming's academic reputation vaulted the college into the ranks of the national liberal arts colleges. This year, for the first time, Thomson Peterson listed Lycoming among the 400 elite colleges in its Guide to Competitive Colleges.

Lycoming's history has been one of steady evolution since its founding in 1812. In just the past decade, average SAT scores of incoming freshmen have risen by almost 50 points. We are attracting top students who are well prepared and highly motivated. Our graduates are winning coveted graduate school slots and going on to great jobs.

Up to this point, Lycoming's rise has been largely due to the hard work of very dedicated faculty and staff.

The next step is to generate the financial resources to match the College's academic reputation.

This time, we must look to alumni, parents and friends of the college.

Very simply, we need your continued financial support and the participation of more of our alumni. This past year 21% of our alumni base supported the Annual Fund. While we're grateful for their vision, we are now in a league where our new peer colleges have alumni participation rates of over 50%. While we raised a record $710,000 in unrestricted funds this year, we are competing with colleges who have annual funds of one million dollars and up and endowments that are five to ten times the size of ours.

With the right financial resources, we can expand Lycoming's reputation and, at the same time, ensure that a Lycoming education is affordable for all its students.

Along with my son, I can feel the momentum of an institution that is on the move, one that offers an uncompromised academic product to a new generation of talented and motivated students.

The future of Lycoming College has never been brighter. We have within our grasp the ability to make this college even better through your continued support. Please join me in this effort and encourage your Lycoming friends to do the same.

Sincerely,

Thomas L. Ruhl P '06

Development and College Relations

Led by the generosity and commitment of David '69 and Beati '69 Gathman, chairs of the 2002 Lycoming Annual Fund National Committee, Lycoming alumni and friends joined together to raise $711,600 for the 2002 Lycoming Annual Fund. These annual funds are extremely important to the current students of Lycoming – in fact, without them the Lycoming experience would be quite different. Gifts to the Lycoming Annual Fund make it possible for Lycoming to retain a top-of-the-line faculty and provide student services, which enrich the lives of the 1,400 students Lycoming College serves.

A large volunteer base is the key to the future success of the Lycoming Annual Fund. Lycoming is grateful to the members of the 2002 Lycoming Annual Fund National Committee. In a year filled with much uncertainty, this committee provided guidance and feedback to the development office. Their leadership and dedication to Lycoming is greatly appreciated. As we move forward, the 2003 committee will begin to focus on alumni participation. Though we reached our 2002 goal, alumni participation in the Lycoming Annual Fund declined to 21%. This number is low compared to many of Lycoming's peer colleges. The focus must remain on reaching each alum and sending the message that every gift makes a difference...regardless of its size! Lycoming hopes to increase the support of the reunion giving program established by the Class of 1977. Clark Gaughan '77 led his class in raising $8,172 for the Lycoming Annual Fund in recognition of their 25th reunion - $2,000 more than their total giving to the 2001 Lycoming Annual Fund.

Whether you are an alumnus, alumna, parent, or friend, you can make a gift of time to Lycoming that is just as important as your financial contribution. If you are interested in serving as a volunteer for the Lycoming Annual Fund, please contact Jennifer Wilson, Director of Annual Giving, at 570-321-4395 or wilson@lycoming.edu. Thank you again to all of the supporters of the 2002 Lycoming Annual Fund.

Profile

When Cheryl Eck Spencer was an undergraduate at Lycoming College, she wanted to save the world from cancer, a disease that claimed both her father and Dr. Frederick, one of her chemistry professors.

In graduate school and during her subsequent career at Abbott Laboratories, she found out that finding cures for cancer would not be easy. Cancer is a very complex disease, and although a number of breakthroughs have been discovered for its prevention, diagnosis and treatment, the disease continues to be one of the leading causes of death. Saving the world from cancer would not be easy.

Now in their fifth decade, she and her husband are at point in their lives where they want to give something back and have an impact on things they value most.

In addition to her support of the Annual Fund, Cheryl has set up an endowed scholarship that eventually will provide financial aid to a student who is interested in pursuing a career in bio-ethics or bio-medical research.

Cheryl was motivated in her scholarship designation by her career interests and by what she sees as a drift in ethics—in society as well as in her own field. Early on as a graduate student, she discovered that people, even scientists, didn't always tell the truth. She was disappointed and aghast to find that a few medical researchers could compromise the integrity of research by reporting and publishing results based on fraudulent, made-up data.

In her current position, as director of Global Pharmaceutical R & D Quality Compliance, she leads a group of individuals who help interpret regulations and develop quality systems for pre-clinical and clinical research. She has also served on several international committees responsible for the creation of bio-medical research standards and guidelines.

"The idea of grappling with legal and ethical issues never crossed my mind when I was in college. In preparation for life and work, I'd like to see students wrestle with some current ethical issues: like genetic engineering."

"The education I received at Lycoming is unique. I see that now, because I hire people educated at schools that provided technical skills but did not provide a liberal arts education. I value my liberal arts education because it taught me to think—and it gave me a broad base of knowledge."

"I could choose to buy a bigger house, another new car or any number of possessions," she admits. "or... I could put the resources into education and into changing the thinking of the next generation."

In this way, Cheryl has found her own way to change the world.

Profile

Donor:

Linda Porr Sweeney '78

Location:

Lancaster, Pennsylvania

Major:

Political Science

Career:

Lawyer: Partner,

Porr & Devine, LLC

Giving:

- ▶ Consistent donor to Lycoming Annual Fund at the President's Cabinet level
- ▶ Class of 1978 25th Reunion Giving Chair

Linda Porr Sweeney came to Lycoming College with the thought of becoming a journalist until, she says, "Mike Roskin hemorrhaged red ink on one of my papers."

Instead she became smitten with the law after a constitutional law course with Dr. Ernest Giglio. The textbook is still on her bookshelf.

Ironically, although she chose the legal profession over journalism, she believes she does more writing in her job as a lawyer than she might have done as a journalist.

Her legal career has emphasized civil litigation; and over the years, she has come to concentrate her energies on defending physicians in hospitals from medical malpractice suits. "I believe that I enjoy the medicine more than the law," she says.

Some 20 years ago, 40% of the students in her class at Villanova School of Law were women. "Very few of us have continued practicing without interruption. Those of us who stayed around are now enjoying the fruits of [that commitment]."

Linda has been able to balance both a very demanding career and a family. She is married to Joe Sweeney and has three children: Maggie, 13; Joe, 11; and Jack, 5.

While she has felt the Mommy tug on many mornings, "My passion for the work has kept me going. I like what I'm doing," she says.

Linda also likes giving back. "A large part of the reason why I am where I am today is Lycoming," she says.

There's one more reason: "When I was at Lycoming, I got financial support," says Linda. I want to be able to help those who came after me."

R and J Ertel, Inc., mechanical contractors specializing in heating, air conditioning and plumbing, is a Williamsport institution and a company that has had close ties with Lycoming College for many, many years.

The Ertel family has been in plumbing since 1924. John Ertel, the second generation to run the company, is a 1957 graduate while his wife, Barbara Griffith Ertel, graduated in 1956.

John and Barbara's twin sons now run the company: Dan Ertel is president and Bill Ertel is secretary/treasurer. While neither is a Lycoming College alumnus, they have continued the close relationship with the college. On any given fall Saturday, Dan and Bill can be caught watching Lycoming football under head coach Frank Girardi who, in earlier years, was their physical education teacher.

While R & J Ertel, Inc., has done a number of projects on the campus, Dan and Bill Ertel support the College, not because it's a client, but because they see Lycoming as a worthy philanthropic endeavor.

"It's local, small and private," Dan explains. "And the money stays here [in the community]."

Like most companies, R & J Ertel has been affected by the economy, but the Ertels chose not to cut back on their philanthropic support.

"It's good to support a local institution like Lycoming College," says Bill.

TOWER SOCIETY

The Tower Society recognizes those individuals who have included Lycoming College in their estate plans, as a beneficiary of their retirement plan, or through a significant deferred gift, and have notified the College of those plans.

Lycoming Welcomes the Class of 2006

Lycoming welcomed 378 students on August 23 as members of the Lycoming College Class of 2006.

The freshmen class draws its students from 15 states, reaching to Texas and California, in a wider geographical representation than ever before.

Some 16 students have siblings who either recently graduated or are currently students at Lycoming College. Nine freshmen have a parent who is a Lycoming College alumnus.

Applications to Lycoming were at an all time high this year, up 9% from last year, and SAT scores of accepted students were up 12 points over last year.

Otto Sonder '46 Greets Freshmen at Convocation

Raindrops fell on the Freshman Convocation but not on the spirit of Otto Sonder, who came back to campus to address the Class of 2006, sixty years after his own graduation from Williamsport Dickinson Seminary and Junior College. Sonder, who recently retired as professor of sociology at Hartwick College in Oneonta, N.Y., told students that he had had a lucky life for he had never left college. Indeed, Sonder taught at Lycoming College from 1956 to 1968.

"The best idea I can offer for a good, pleasant, enriched experience," Sonder told the students, "is to learn to love the act of learning. Find role models on campus," he also admonished. "I became a professor, I am certain, because of the unbelievably good faculty I found here."

Bishop D. Frederick Wertz Award to Kenneth R. Arthur

The Bishop D. Frederick Wertz Award for Outstanding Service to the Church was presented to Rev. Kenneth R. Arthur '58 this past June during the annual meeting of the Central Pennsylvania Conference, United Methodist Church.

The award is given in honor of Bishop Wertz, who served as Lycoming College's president from 1955 through 1968.

Rev. Arthur has been the administrator of the United Methodist Home for Children at Mechanicsburg since 1971. Under his direction, the Home recently completed a new $1.2 million emergency shelter facility that provides short term housing for up to 16 neglected and abused children. He and his wife, Peggy, have four children: Kenneth, Kim '83, Karen '87 and Kristin '93.

Elders in Church

Four Lycoming College graduates were ordained as Elders in the United Methodist Church this past August: Rev. Brand Eaton '95, Rev. Gary Weaver '96, Rev. Howard Woodruff '94, and Rev. William Anderson '80.

Merck Update:

We found two more Lycoming College alumni who work at Merck Pharmaceutical Company since we did the story on our Merck connection in the spring '02 issue of the Lycoming Magazine.

Stephen C. Parente '98 (biology) who has been working for Merck since October 2000. Steve is currently in Control Monitoring and his duties include certifying all HEPA filter devices at the West Point site. Several members of his family work or have worked for Merck, including parents, cousins, an uncle and Steve's grandfather. Steve's mother's boss is also a Lycoming graduate.

Robert A. Ceere, Jr., '80 (business administration) has been working for Merck & Co., Inc., in Rahway, N.J., since 1995. He is a senior project auditor in Central Engineering Project Auditing, whose duties include auditing capital projects, contractors, and engineering and construction services.

In addition, we failed to note that two of the people profiled in the article, Brian Belz and Stacy Howerter, had done extensive chemistry research with Dr. Charles H. Mahler, associate professor of chemistry.

September 11 Remembered

Lycoming College remembered the events of September 11, 2001, with a special service on the Main Quad on the anniversary day. Classes were cancelled for the 10:30 a.m. event that began with a parade of flags from every nation ever represented in the Lycoming College student body.

After the service, the College dedicated a pin oak tree near the Heim Biology and Chemistry Building to the memory of the three alumni lost in the World Trade Center:

- ▶ Angela Vaira Kyte '73
- ▶ Jon Vandevander '79
- ▶ Justin Molisani '81

Note: Class notes are compiled from information submitted by alumni class scribes, newspaper clippings received through our press clipping service, and press releases and letters sent directly to the alumni office.

Information received after September 1, 2002, will be in a future issue of the Lycoming College Magazine.

A Gardener's Gardener

As a young wife and mother, Janet Brown Johnescu never really had time for a garden. With her husband working for Marriott food service, the Johnescus were moving every two years. "After the fifth house, I gave up on a garden," says Janet.

When they relocated to Canton, Ohio, in 1969, she and her husband quickly became involved in owning and managing three 24-hour donut stores. Still, there was no time for a garden.

In 1994, newly widowed, Janet planted a number of Hostas in the natural woodland of her backyard. Thus began Hillcreek Gardens.

Today, she has approximately 7,000 perennials and 20,000 bulbs that include 255 varieties of Hostas, 236 varieties of Daylilies, 27 varieties of water lilies, coral bells, and pulmonaria—all in a 3/4 acre five-sided lot which ends in the middle of a creek. She employs two garden assistants who plant almost 100 flats of annuals each year. Janet often receives plants three to five years before they are available to the public so that many of her flowers are new and unknown to the weekend gardener.

"My goal is to do something different each year to add to the interest of the garden," she says.

She is both a member of the Ohio Landscape and Nurseryman's Association and licensed by the Department of Agricultural in Ohio to sell plants, which is what she does with her surplus.

Janet's garden has gone from hobby to passion. In 1998, she added lighting and 10 small waterfalls that cascade down to a pond. She has three aluminum sculptures by Max Worthington of Delaware, Ohio, and two recent bronze additions by Gary Price of Utah.

Janet opens the garden to the public on select Sundays during the prime blooming seasons beginning with the early daffodils and continuing through the mums. For groups wishing to visit, she requests donations of $2.00 per person, which she contributes to another love: the Stark County Humane Society.

Gardening wasn't even on her mind when she came from Ohio to enroll in the secretarial course at Lycoming College. Her ties to Lycoming College go back even farther. Her father,

Rev. Raymond Hunter Brown, graduated from Dickinson Seminary in 1921, and her sister, Barbara Brown DeBole, is a 1954 graduate

While the gardening takes up time, Janet remains very active in the donut shop business.

Six years ago, when Dunkin' Donuts bought out Mr. Donut (franchise for the Johnescu stores), Janet became one of five founders of Donut Connections, a new chain of 125 outlets and the first true co-op in fast food industry.

As a member of the executive committee of the Board of Directors, she helped to implement the central buying unit of the chain while her daughter handles day-to-day operations of their own three stores.

Janet loves to entertain and enjoys her garden on a regular basis. "When you are out in the garden, you are with God and it's wonderful," she explains.

From Big Screen Career to Micro Cameras

Howard Worth '58

spent a career bringing stories to the big screen; then used his knowledge to market a technology that can discover microscopic breast cancer ten years before a standard mammogram.

It's a career path he could have never predicted for himself. Certainly not in his college days when he played tackle for the football team and majored in business.

It was a Fellini film that Prof. Russell Graves showed in the basement of Clarke Chapel that forever changed Howard's life and direction.

After college Howard landed a job with CBS and The 20th Century Show with Walter Chronkite. Four years later, he was asked by ABC to head up a four-hour production starring Gregory Peck entitled Africa which later won a Peabody Award. He was the executive in charge of production, and it was there that he started directing.

Returning to the states, he was asked to direct and produce the film on the life of the great Indian musician, Ravi Shankar, entitled Raga. Through his acquaintance with Shanker, he met and worked with the late George Harrison of the Beatles. Apple (the Beatles Company) produced the soundtrack album for Raga and distributed the film world-wide.

Worth worked on a number of films — directing, producing, and managing the production— and developed such films as 9 1/2 Weeks and Love at First Bite, Wild Orchid and others.

A full career to be sure, but Worth started a second career almost by accident. In a routine eye examination, he became interested in a piece of equipment that magnified a tear duct to the size of a 50-cent piece. With his knowledge of cameras, Worth felt he could devise a technology that could enlarge the image still more.

Then seven years ago, Worth became one of the founders of a technology company called Acueity. With no real technology knowledge but motivated by the cancer death of a friend, Worth researched and helped to design a Breast Scope, a camera so small it actually can be inserted through the nipple to visualize the milk ducts where most cancers originate.

The device is designed to give physicians the flexibility to perform a range of minimally invasive mammary duct procedures.

This twist in his career is particularly gratifying to Howard because the device saves invasive surgery and ultimately lives.

His burgeoning knowledge in medical technology also led him to work on a joint project with an old Lycoming buddy, Norm Medow '60, now a pediatric ophthalmologist, was looking for a way to enlarge his field of vision in his very delicate operations.

Although still on the Board of Acueity, Howard is back in films and TV with Masterpiece Entertainment and as co-founder of the Art of Change Foundation, a nonprofit group.

Howard lives in Venice, California, a short walk from the Pacific Ocean.

Looking back on his career, if he had to pick out something to be his legacy, it would be his first film premiere, Raga, and the breast scope.

"The journey is never predictable," says Howard. "It is the magic of life."

Jeffrey, Karen and Walter Paulick.

Gift of Life

Karen Luce Paulick '74

When Karen Luce Paulick was 32 years old, a doctor told her the straight truth. "Everyone is going to die sometime," he said, "but you will die with someone else's liver."

This was how she learned that she had primary biliary cyrosis of the liver, a disease that is more typically found in a person at least twice her age.

She learned how to live with the ticking time bomb that was her liver. Her predicament, however, became more complicated with she discovered in 1989 that she was pregnant. She chose to go off her prescribed medication and continue the pregnancy, which resulted in the birth of a healthy son, Jeffrey.

In 1996, things began to fall apart. The time had come for a transplant. In August, after making arrangements for a friend to stay with her young son, Karen flew to Pittsburgh to be close to the Thomas E. Starzl Transplant Institute at the Pittsburgh Medical Center, the leading center for liver transplants in the United States. She waited. "What do you do?"

Karen reflected. "I couldn't pray for a donor."

During this tenuous time, Karen recalls, her Lyco friends stood by her. Tommy and Cindi Weiss Milberger '74 picked up family members at the airport. Sherry McPherson '74 and Jan Rego '74 brought meals and someone to talk to

They don't tell patients when there is a possible donor available, Karen learned from other transplant recipients. "You'll know," they told her, "if they tell you they need to draw some blood from you."

Shortly after midnight on September 8, 1996, a nurse came into her room and asked if she could draw some blood. There was an available donor, and in a matter of hours, Karen was wheeled into the operating room for the 15-hour $300,000 transplant procedure.

From the start, the new liver has made a difference in Karen's life. Today, more than five years later, she leads an active life raising her teenage son in Riverhead, Long Island, and volunteering on projects that promote organ donor awareness.

She urges everyone to check off the donor box on their license. Her car sports a bumper sticker that says "Make a Miracle, Be an Organ Donor."

Major Kirby Watson '88 at right in Afghanistan.

Kirby Watson '88 Notes from Afghanistan

Drinkable water is very scarce in the area surrounding Kabul, Afghanistan, and American military personnel hand out bottles of water to children in the same way GIs in WWII tossed them candy bars.

So it made an impression on Major Kirby Watson '88 when one small boy defiantly poured his bottle of water on the ground. There's a lot of hatred in Afghanistan, and a lot of it is directed at Americans, says Watson, who was stationed in Bagram for four months. You can't tell who is Taliban and who is not; who is pro-American and who is not.

Watson found the Afghanistan assignment one of the most interesting and challenging of his 14-year military career.

The challenge was serving as the communication officer for a Special Forces unit. Watson, physics major at Lycoming and a wrestler, was responsible for setting up and maintaining the Local Area Network, the wireless network, and the video teleconferencing center. For his efforts, he was awarded the Bronze Star for overall performance under combat. While he was never in the thick of combat, the compound endured harassing fire from the Taliban, which actually killed a couple of soldiers in Watson's group.

It's what's Brewing in Boyertown John Hocking '96

By Michelle Karas
Reprinted in part with permission from the Pottsville (PA) Mercury.

Boyertown — Something new is percolating at the top of town.

Daily Grinds Gourmet Coffee House & Café, 2 E. Philadelphia Ave., opened several months ago with little fanfare.

Owner John Hocking '96 decided one late April day was as good a time as any for a "sof," or unadvertised, opening to test the waters for the venture. Not long after he put out an open flag and set a placard on the sidewalk announcing the daily specials, people began to line up.

"I expected to do maybe five lunches," said Hocking, a Philadelphia resident. "That day we served 45 lunches. We've been slammed since Day One."

Since that busy day, Hocking has been trying to adapt the business to meet the needs of the local clientele. For instance, he originally planned to do counter service only, but discovered customers wanted table service. So he put a "help wanted" sign in the window and hired waitstaff.

The business has taken on a life of its own," said Hocking, who is pleased to see a steady lunch crowd developing. "We have a pretty straightforward menu. We keep it simple and we keep it good. And I think people really enjoy the atmosphere."

Open from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, Daily Grinds offers pastries, panini (Italian style sandwiches), fresh salads and, of course, gourmet coffee—starting at $1.25 per cup.

"You can't do just coffee," Hocking said. "You've got to serve lunch too, and have another business going, like the consignment shop. So far, the coffee shop and the consignment shop have really been complementing each other."

A native of New Jersey, Hocking, 29, majored in business at Lycoming College and dove into the family furniture business soon after graduation. Daily trips to a coffee shop near his work sparked his interest in running a shop of his own.

Hocking made his coffee shop dream come true by opening a café in Yardley, Bucks County. Soon, he and partner, Kenneth R. Klosowski, expanded to include a Daily Grinds in Newport, R.I.

Hocking and his partner were looking for a new location in the Philadelphia area. At about the same time, Hocking's father and a partner decided to purchase the Boyer Building. The building's first floor retail space, which was a café and gourmet foods shop in its last incarnation, turned out to be the perfect spot for Daily Grinds, he said.

"I think the town has a lot of potential to turn around and become a real business/shopping district," Hocking said. "I got a sense that this kind of shop was needed here."

Are you interested in financial planning that:

- Saves income tax?
- Saves capital gains tax?
- Saves federal estate tax?
- Saves probate costs?
- Increases your income?
- Increases the income you provide for your spouse or other survivor?
- Allows you control in selecting a trustee and percentage of return for a lifetime income?
- Enables you to provide a gift for Lycoming College and support the mission and goals you believe in?

If you answered "Yes" to some or all of these questions, you will be interested in gift options which provide lifetime income and save income tax. We'd be delighted to provide you with more details about these gift planning opportunities. Contact Keith Barrows, barrows@lycoming.edu 570-321-4036.

Tired of 4% (or less) returns? Does 7% or 8% strike your fancy?

It's not too good to be true!

Q: How does it work?

A: A gift annuity is a contract between a donor and a charity, backed by all of the assets of the charity. It provides a fixed monthly payment for life for one or more donors.

Q: How much can I earn?

A: If you are 65, you will receive 6.7%; if you are 72, the payment will be 7.4%. Please see the table to find the payments for your age(s).
